

WHY DO WE COME BACK?

How many times have you been asked "Why do you go to that dumb movie?" How many times have you been there anyway? These are certainly valid questions. My answer is usually that it's a social thing or that it's like sex. You can't describe sex to someone who has never had it. Everyone must find there own answers. One thing is certain - "Rocky Horror" is addictive. It's almost 10 years old, but the legend continues and grows. I can think of nothing else that expresses the feeling of fun and participation. So the next time you feel critized for going to "Rocky Horror," tell them to see it themselfs. And if they have and they still don't like it, well, then you're in trouble.

It looks like what you want to do here is find your way from the outside of the lips to the inside of the throat (editor).

ON JOKES

I have been informed by certain individuals that they found the joke that I published last week to be stupid. Well, all I can say is that I thought it was pretty funny because I made it up myself. If someone out there can think of some good RHPS jokes, how about sending them in? Even if I don't think they are as funny as mine, I'll put them in just to amuse those who don't want me to ever write a joke again as long as I live. (Needless to say, I am hurt about this whole thing).

Please, someone, write a letter to this paper. I'm getting lonely.
