THE WEEK IN REVIEW:

Last week's show was a special treat for pre-show coordinators Chip and Jay. For the 1st time the entire Saturday night cast was involved in the show. The occasion was the first Roxy pre-show. Selections from the Roxy album included "Damnit Janet" performed by Chip and Gina Angelo, "Science Fiction" by Missy Snoddy, "Sweet Transvestite" by Jay Brooks, and the Chambers Brothers hit "Time has Come Today" by Matt Donga. The song which really went over however was "Time Warp" by Roy Rossi, Shielarae Carpentier, and Amy. The song was made a success by the combination of Roy's outgoing enthusiasm and a flawless performance by the two girls.

The show was a monumental success as it was the 1st time that more than two cast members (outside Chip and Jay) were involved in a pre-show.

"TONIGHT!

MY UNCONVENTIONAL CONVENTIONISTS

Tonight's pre-show will feature the songs; "Werewolves of London", performed by Chip and Bill Proctor, "Old Time Rock n Roll" which will be done by Jay Brooks, and Steve Martin's "King Tut" to be performed by the ever flamboyant Matt Donga.

Be sure not to miss the opening song "Werewolves" as if all goes right the song has the potential to be a classic in the making (and you were there).

OUTLOOK for TONIGHT: good

Audience Participation

Starting this week, we are going to ask a question and ask you, the audience to speak your mind. Simply mail your response to the address listed at the bottom of the newsletter.

This weeks question: Should the pre-show have a theme song which is done every week? ex. "Big Balls". Mail us your response and/or another song we should do and let us know.

Success in any field is usually guaranteed by one person. The one who sets things in motion, the person who makes it all happen, that unsung hero. The person who ensures success but brings no glory back upon himself. In our pre-shows that person is Eric.

UP CLOSE AND PERSONAL WITH:

ERIC* Who is Eric? Eric is the blonde haired man who sells tickets at the door. Why is Eric our unsung hero? Because of Eric's college background in cinematology, and because of his highly skilled manual dexterity, he is able to depress the button on the tape recorder which reads "play", thus allowing the music to start and the pre-show to begin.

Eric is the current owner of the Meadowbrook Cinema, a multi-million dollar corporation. It is rumoured that Eric aquired the cinema in a trade for one of his former girlfriends and a pack of cigarettes.

Eric also promises to participate in one of our pre-shows if the audience reaches 200 or more... so lets go.
