Don't beleave anyone over ...

If there's any degree of accuracy to the unfinished adage above, then this weekend is my last opportunity to deliver to you important and solemn truths. My last chance to bring disgrace to the lies that are cast upon you by people that are over 30.

It's bad enough that people UNDER that dreaded figure go around spewing garbage (Garbage - a lie that isn't even a GOOD lie). So let's set the record straight on a few matters:

1) You are NEVER too old to go to Rocky Horror or to DO Rocky Horror. This is a physiological fact. If you have the strenght and endurance to say, carry groceries in from the car, I think going to or doing the show will be a snap to you. Many people over 30 like to get out of doing a lot of things by saying they are too old. And then there are the jokers 27, 25, 20, 16 ... years old who even like to say that. These are the ones who've gotton a jump on excuse making early in life. Give me a break.

2) There is no correlation, direct or inverse, between aging, Rocky Horror, maturity, and "acting" mature. There's so much bullshit around this concept of "maturity" that I, and I bet you too, could write a set of encyclopaedias on it. Somehow, the issue of maturity and Rocky Horror have gotton mixed together. People beleave that going to the show is a sign of a lack of this marvelous quality called maturity. It's about as ridiculous as equating "acting" mature with maturity. Maybe it's as stupid as thinking that with age comes maturity. Now-a-days, it REALLY gets confusing because there's this equally full-of-shit counter culture going around constantly telling you (even though you never asked) that they are not normal, not grown-up, and blissfully not mature. Man! You DO what you DO. You ARE what you ARE. There are 6 billion people in the world. Get out of my face!

World-ly Series TV tips

- Special for R.I. ROCKY
- ▶ Bull Durham's Annie Savoy explained the art of baseball to pitching phenom Eddy Calvin "Nuke" LaLoosh. Now she's showing us.
- ▶ Savoy - better known as Susan Sarandon - explains in the latest TV Guide how to watch the World Series, which starts Saturday at 8 p.m. EDT.
- ▶ "Never root for a team whose uniforms have elastic stretch waistbands. They are unsightly and without grace," she says. "It is the reason the Cubs never make it."
- ▶ Drop that remote:
- ▶ "To be switching channels shows a lack of respect."
- ▶ Unplug the phone.
- ▶ Avoid health food.
- ▶ Nachos, dip, beer and hot dogs are spiritually correct. Your biosystem will adjust and forgive you."
- ▶ Point the TV screen north, your feet south and "refreshments at equidistant points east and west."
- ▶ Stick with one team: "Miracles can happen. You've just gotta believe."
- ▶ The Series ought to go seven games, too.
- ▶ "It's a holy, magic number, a prime number," she says. "And a seventh game assures the longest possible baseball season."

With age does not necessarily come maturity, but only the POTENTIAL for it. If you do reach that potential, maybe you don't want it anyway. ROCKY HORROR plays no role in any of this. On top of that, why should anyone care what choices you make concerning these issues. So if some people, over OR under 30, want to ruin their bodies far more than natural aging will and if they want to act mature, whether it's real or not, it shouldn't matter to you. Do what you know is good for you. And then decide if you want to go ROCKY HORROR. Don't perfert the decisions by mixing them. Trust me now before I jump over the hill. RR
