Thanks

At this time, I would like to thank the people who, without their help, this new newsletter would not be in your hands right now. David Marks is the guy who makes the copies each week. Fred Adams helped to obtain the different kinds of lettering for the headlines. Jon Schermerhorn helped me think of a name for this newsletter. I would also like to thank Janet Cheshier and Mike McGinity for giving me the first two articles printed in this paper (other than mine). Other articles and letters will also be printed as soon as someone gives them to me.

BREASTS

Not many people know it, but this is national Breast weekend. So let us pause a moment to think about those Beautiful, squeezable, huggable, touchable protuberances that drive men crazy. I have received two letters on this subject from two different women. They have both asked that their names be withheld. Here is a bit of both.

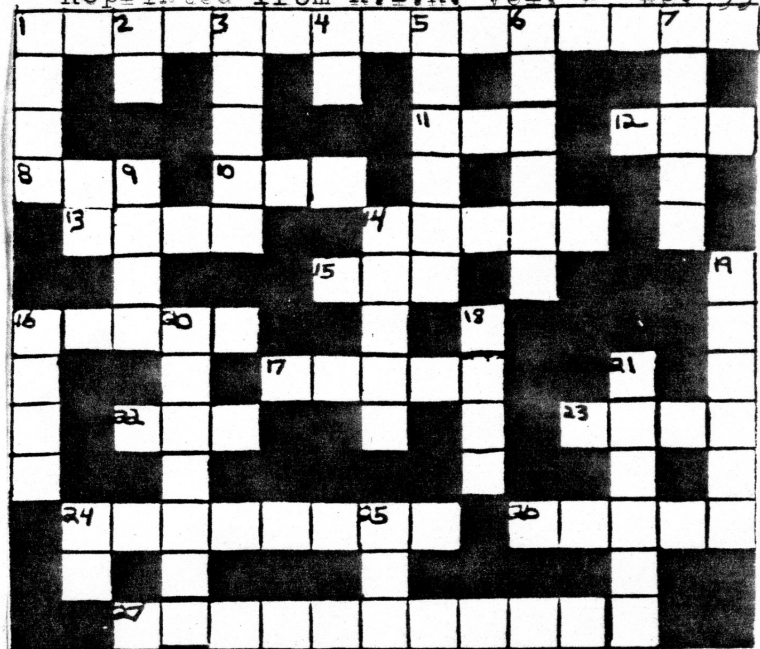

"My breasts are fairly large (D cup), but I've often thought it would be nice to have small breasts. They are an encumbrance. They make me feel fat and dumpy and lumpy. They always get in the way!"

"I have always had small breasts and I wish I was more voluptuous. I always wear padded bras but it is really embarrassing when a guy finds out."

So you see, guys, women are very worried about what men think of their boobs, so, this weekend, complement some strange woman by walking up to her and give 'em a little squeeze (not too hard). Believe me, she will thank you for it.
