The Swap is Dead. Long Live the Fun.

The last 2 weeks have involved a swapping of casts between Groton, CT & Warwick, RI. Now that that's over, we're alllllll YOURS! Starting this weekend, a new drive will be put forth to rejuvenate the excitement & energy around here.

Week # 100 is fast approaching. It's scary to think how quickly this has come to us. There are 7 regular cast members left from the last theatre. You may not think that's very much, but it's actually more than how many cast members in Cumberland were still around from the previous theatre after a 100 weeks there. RR

TOGA Night

Hell sure whynot? The wheather's warm enough. It's time for the TOGA night. When? How 'bout 2 weeks from this Saturday. Let's go with July 15. TOGA night. Cast does the show in Togas. The audience comes dressed in Togas. Anyone who doesn't pays an extra buck at the door (just kidded'). We've found this to be one of the bigger audience attractions since everyone can participate. Does Riff Really Have a Hump?

This is something seldom talked about or brought up, but it's always bothered me since the first time I saw the movie. He walks around the entire time as the epitome of a hunchback. You know, like Egor from the Frankenstein movies? Then, at the end, he miraculously doesn't even have a hump. First time I saw it, I wondered if it was the same character. It can't be some sort of gigantic blooper. But that hump is no longer to be seen. Two theories come to mind. One is that he was faking it all along, walking around with a pillow under his coat. It could be to fool Frank, but it's unlikely Frank didn't already know. Most likely, the Transylvanians thought this sort of character would blend in with the castle to fool the Earth people. And it did fool Brad & Janet. The only other possibility that comes to mind is metamorphosis. This is science fiction. But that's seems unlikely. What do YOU think? Hmumumum RR

LIMBO Night

Now that I've mentioned Toga Night, I know that halfadozen people will say "How about a _____ Night?" And that's fine. But I do realize that the most popular night we ever had involving the audience was Limbo Night, not just @ the MBC, but of all times! The audience crowd that night was huge, and the participation unprecedented. We're gonna do it again! We'll work up some prizes again too. Ya-hoo, I can't wait! When? When are we going to have it? Keep coming & you'll find out. RR
